

SALES: HOW TO TURN A "NO" INTO A "YES"

TRAINING WORKBOOK

KARALEE HELDER

Welcome to this dynamic Sales Training Session on how to turn a "no" to a "yes"!

This session has been designed to allow you to unlock the strategies, techniques, and practical insights you need to turn 'no' into a resounding 'yes' with your clients.

This session will be interactive and include lots of engagement and participation opportunities to allow you to immerse yourself in the learning experience.

Whether you're new to the world of sales or a seasoned professional, you'll find valuable insights here to boost your success. We'll explore real-world scenarios, share expert tips, and engage in interactive exercises to hone your skills.

AGENDA

SESSION OBJECTIVES

- | | |
|--------------------------|---|
| • Introduction | • Understand the reasons why clients say "no" and how to overcome their objections |
| • Engagement Poll | |
| • Topic in depth | • Develop effective questioning techniques to build trust and rapport with clients and understand their needs |
| • Scenario Exercises | |
| • Q&A | • Practice active listening and questioning skills to uncover underlying objections and address them |
| • Summary & Post Session | |
| | • Learn how to communicate value and benefits effectively to clients |
| | • Gain confidence in handling objections and closing more deals |

TABLE OF CONTENTS

01

WHY CLIENTS SAY NO

03

HOW TO OVERCOME CLIENT OBJECTIONS

05

EFFECTIVE QUESTIONING

09

ACTIVE LISTENING

11

ROLE PLAY SCENARIOS

13

SUMMARY

WHY CLIENTS SAY NO

DID YOU KNOW?

67% Of lost sales are a result of sales reps not properly qualifying potential customers before taking them through the full sales process.

Why do clients say no to you?

- A. They don't have the budget.
- B. They need more time to think about it.
- C. They're happy with their current solution.
- D. They don't understand the value.
- E. All of the above.

WHY CLIENTS SAY NO

Examples of why clients say no:

- "I need some time to think about it."
- "It's too expensive."
- "I need some time to think about it."
- "It's too expensive."
- "Just send me some information."
- "We don't have the budget."
- "I can get a cheaper version somewhere else."
- "We're being downsized/bought out."
- "I don't like being locked into a contract."
- "I'm currently under contract with someone else."
- "I'm happy with [competitor]."
- "We're doing fine in this area/I'm okay with the status quo."
- "I've been burned before." / "I had a bad experience with a similar products/services."

These objections almost always fall into 1 of 5 categories:

1. Price
2. Competitor / Relationship / Experiences
3. Time/Resources
4. Product/Value
5. Readiness to purchase

NOTE: By understanding these categories and learning how to maneuver and respond, you can turn your prospect's sales objections to your advantage.

HOW TO OVERCOME CLIENT OBJECTIONS

THE E.A.S.C MODEL

There are different variations of this model out there that you may have heard of this model stands for Empathizing, Asking effective questions for majority of the conversation until you've reached a great Solution to which you're able to Close the client towards a business outcome.

E – Empathize First it starts with Empathize (where you will spend 5% of the conversation): This is your feel, felt, found statement / where you empathize with the clients objection and you can relay anecdotal evidence of where past clients have felt that however through using your services achieved their goals on an advanced timeline that satisfied their budgetary requirements.

A – Ask Then you move on to the Ask (where you will spend 75% of the conversation): this is where you'll spend a majority of your time in the conversation seeking to understanding what underpins their objection and getting to the clients pain points. Once you've gathered enough info where you feel confident to present a solution you can move on. A good rule of thumb is to hold back the sell for at least 7 questions. It may be tempting to get straight to the solution but in todays market that comes off disingenuous.

HOW TO OVERCOME CLIENT OBJECTIONS

S – Solution

Next is the Solution (where you will spend 10% of the conversation): in this you'll take all of the info you gathered while asking questions and actively listening to your client to provide a viable solution.

C - Close

The final stage is to Close (where you will spend 5% of the conversation): close towards a business outcome, whether it be a subsequent meeting with more potential clients, a signed contract, or a project award make sure you've gotten to some place where you can continue the relationship.

“ENGAGING PEOPLE IS ABOUT MEETING THEIR NEEDS – NOT YOURS.”

- TONY ROBBINS

EFFECTIVE QUESTIONING

THE 5 TYPES OF EFFECTIVE QUESTIONS

Effective questioning is critical to overcoming client objection, as we previously learned you'll spend 75% of your time asking questions and seeking to understand what underlies our clients objections. The following 5 question types are the best for building rapport, gathering information, and truly understanding your clients needs.

1ST TYPE

OPEN ENDED QUESTIONS

Description: These are questions that encourage the respondent to provide a detailed and thoughtful answer. They usually begin with words like "what," "how," or "why." Open-ended questions are useful for gathering information, building rapport, and encouraging discussion.

Examples:

- "What are your goals for this project?"
- "How do you see our product fitting into your business?"
- "Why is this issue important to you?"

2ND TYPE

CLARIFYING QUESTIONS

Description: These are questions that help you better understand what the respondent is saying. They are useful for avoiding misunderstandings and ensuring that you have all the information you need.

Examples:

- "Can you give me an example of what you mean?"
- "What specifically do you mean by that?"
- "Can you help me understand what you're looking for?"

EFFECTIVE QUESTIONING

3RD TYPE

HYPOTHETICAL QUESTIONS

Description: These are questions that ask the respondent to imagine a particular scenario or situation. They can be useful for helping the respondent think about the future and consider different possibilities.

Examples:

- "What would happen if you implemented this solution?"
- "How would your business change if you had access to this technology?"
- "What if we could help you achieve your goals faster?"

4TH TYPE

FEELING QUESTIONS

Description: These are questions that ask the respondent about their emotions or feelings. They can be useful for building rapport and understanding the respondent's perspective.

Examples:

- "How do you feel about your current situation?"
- "What emotions come up when you think about this issue?"
- "How important is this to you on a personal level?"

5TH TYPE

CLOSE ENDED QUESTIONS

Description: These are questions that can be answered with a simple "yes" or "no" or other short answer. They can be useful for gathering specific information quickly, but they don't encourage discussion or provide much detail.

Examples:

- "Is this something you're interested in?"
- "Do you have a budget for this project?"
- "Have you worked with our company before?"

In summary: you need to use these question types in this order for best results as this acts as a questioning funnel leading you to better understand the potential solution.

EFFECTIVE QUESTIONING

THE 5 TYPES OF QUESTIONS TO AVOID

Asking the right questions is crucial to effective communication. However, there are 5 types of questions that you should avoid.

1ST TYPE

LEADING

Description: These are questions that suggest a particular answer and can be manipulative.

Example:

- “Don’t you think there is room in the budget for a superior service like ours?”

2ND TYPE

MULTIPLE

Description: These are questions that ask multiple things at once and can be confusing.

Example:

- “Do you like the product and the service you currently receiving? Could it be better? How could I make it better?”

3RD TYPE

ABSOLUTE

Description: These are questions that use words like “always” or “never” and can be too extreme.

Example:

- “Do you always wish for a quicker more reliable service?”

4TH TYPE

FICTIONAL

Description: These are questions involving fantasy or fiction and detract from the goal of a sales call.

Example:

- “If you could be any animal, what would it be?”

EFFECTIVE QUESTIONING

5th TYPE

CASUAL

Description: These are questions that are too vague or uncertain and don't have any focus.

Example:

- “What is your business all about?”

In Summary: By avoiding these types of questions, you can improve your communication skills and build stronger relationships with clients.

ACTIVE LISTENING

PRACTICAL TECHNIQUES

Active listening is an essential skill that plays a vital role in communication with clients. It helps build rapport, understanding, and trust between you and your client. In sales, active listening is a critical skill that can help you identify the needs and expectations of your clients.

ACTIVE LISTENING IS:

Active listening is the process of fully engaging in a conversation by paying attention to the speaker, understanding their message, and responding appropriately.

It involves giving your full attention to the person speaking, interpreting their words, and providing feedback to ensure that you understand them accurately.

BENEFITS OF ACTIVE LISTENING:

- Building trust and rapport
- Improving understanding
- Building trust and rapport
- Improving understanding
- Reducing misunderstandings and conflicts
- Identifying needs and expectations
- Enhancing problem-solving skills

THE KEY ELEMENTS OF ACTIVE LISTENING

PAY ATTENTION

Active listening begins with paying attention to the person speaking. Focus on the person's words, body language, and tone of voice.

CLARIFY

Clarify the speaker's message by asking questions or paraphrasing what they said to ensure that you understand their message accurately.

ACTIVE LISTENING

EMPATHIZE

Empathize with the speaker by acknowledging their feelings and emotions. Try to put yourself in their shoes and understand their perspective.

PROVIDE FEEDBACK

Provide feedback to the speaker to show that you understand their message. It could be a nod, a smile, or a verbal response.

In Summary: Active listening is a crucial skill that can help you become a better recruiter. By mastering this skill, you can build stronger relationships with your clients and candidates, reduce misunderstandings and conflicts, and improve your problem-solving skills. Remember to pay attention, clarify, empathize, and provide feedback to become an active listener.

ROLE PLAY SCENARIOS

OBJECTION HANDLING IN ACTION

Below are some samples of objections to use to assess your ability to use the E.A.S.C Model, effective questioning, and active listening to overcome your client's objection and close towards a business outcome.

Reminders:

- Use E.A.S.C according to the time spent on each phase with emphasis on the Ask phase (75% of your call).
- Actively listening to what your client is saying and refrain from thinking of the next question you'd like to ask.
- Use the effective question types to gather as much information as possible.
- Avoid the questions that will detract from your call or credibility.

Scenarios

"I need some time to think about it."

NOTE: you can use any of the examples listed on page 1

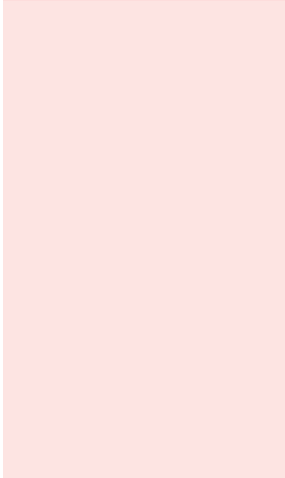

"We don't have the budget."

"I've been burned before."

What to Assess:

1. Did you empathize with your client? Did you spend too much time here or just enough?
2. Were you able to ask a lot of effective questions? Did you spend a majority of your call digging deeper?
3. Did you ask any questions you should avoid? How can you avoid those questions in the future?

ROLE PLAY SCENARIOS

-
4. Did you actively listen to what your client needs? Or were you constantly thinking about the next question you wanted to ask?
 5. Was the solution you provided the best available for the client after digging deeper on their objection?
 6. Were you able to close the client towards a business outcome? Whether it be a subsequent meeting with more potential clients, a signed contract, or a project award make sure you've gotten to some place where you can continue the relationship.

SALES: HOW TO TURN A "NO" INTO A "YES"

SUMMARY

In this dynamic training session, we explored the art of objection handling and how to transform a "no" into a "yes" in the world of sales. The agenda included key elements such as an engaging poll, in-depth topic discussion, scenario breakouts, a participant Q&A, and a summary.

By now you'll be able to...

- Understand your client's objections and overcome them effectively.
- Utilize effective questioning techniques to build trust and rapport.
- Utilize your active listening skills to uncover objections and address them.
- Communicate your value and benefits to clients.
- Confidence in overcoming objections and closing more deals.

In sales, turning a "no" into a "yes" is an art, and it's achievable through understanding objections, effective questioning and communication, and active listening. By mastering these skills, you can build stronger relationships, reduce conflicts, and ultimately achieve your goals in the industry.